MARK THEM OFF AND SEE WHAT THE DAMAGE IS

It's smashing I share a cell with a chap who gets the Football News.

MR. COOKES LATEST CROSSWORD.

Note. It took me several hours working out the clues so do not expect to finish this quickly.

ACROSS.

1. When you add this to a high card you can combat the music
3. A Volkswagen game?
4. A drink. Change a letter and you have something used in 3 across
5. A facetious person, one given to practical jokes.
- ~~7. If you don't "dilly dally" you may reach the end of the~~
8. Following the instructions he did this to the touch paper on Nov. 5th.
10. Without this there would be anarchy
11. Town in Somerset named for hot springs.
13. Mix up this horned & bearded ruminant quadruped and you get a loose flowing outer garment.
14. Rank in Roman Army. MR. Higgins would like to be one next summer at St. Margarets.
7. Piece of water near shore in which ships can ride at anchor.

DOWN.

1. A deceased overweight Alan?
2. Odd job of housework maybe 'scorched' running into a disturbance of the peace by a crowd.
3. A man who is pleased he carried out cannibalism on his lady friend. — phonetically.
5. A punkah worker without the expression of sorrow or regret.
6. Country residence.
9. Company not a crowd.
12. Out of the pod in the wrong order makes this a mimic.

After my recent purge on simple instructions obeying many boys have suspected that I have 'thrown a webbler' as it used to be written in schoolboy comics of my era. I even found stuck to my door the other day a sticky comestible (sweet) wrapper with the highly unlikely title "nutter"

Actually this amused me greatly and it reminded me of a time many years ago when I, also, could not see the reason for the many simple rules that I was up against. On several occasions Nanga East came under attack from terrorists. We were very lucky to have as part of the defensive forces some Gurkha troops. They are magnificent soldiers and after my experiences serving with the Gurkhas I can only say that I am glad they were on our side. Apart from reliable, fierce soldiers, they had another invaluable asset. They carried out their orders to the 'last letter' and anyone who got in their way soon found out what these orders were.

One occasion the Gurkhas counterattacked a terrorist raid and it soon became apparent that this was a carefully planned decoy by the Indonesians. Another attack soon followed and this time we had to deal with it ourselves. On that particular night I soon realised the reasons for instructions and orders. Everyone had an arc of fire, a prearranged amount of ground that he was responsible for. You can easily imagine what would happen if just one person 'let the side down' and let the enemy get through his arc. No matter how well everyone else was doing the whole base could have been lost.

Yes the following of simple instructions had become a little clearer to me.

Shortly after, it was driven home in a more horrifying way. We had a 'rule' in the helicopters that no-one must leave the aircraft until the rotor blades had ceased to rotate. The reason was obvious. After power had been cut the blades dipped down and passed only feet above the ground on occasions. One day, one of the wheel struts snapped and the helicopter heeled over on landing. There was a risk of fire and one of the occupants phoned and made a dash for it. He got several yards before one of the dipping rotor blades caught him on the thighs, above the knees and just below the trunk. It severed his legs like a knife going through butter. It is not a pleasant sight to watch a companion die in such a horrible manner.

All because a simple, but very necessary instruction, had been momentarily forgotten.

(The editors fingers are aching so it will be next week when the story of OoJam the head coolie will be printed.)

A progress chart of the Chess competition will be included in next weeks edition. Any results to be handed in to Mr. Cooke.

If you find the competitions difficult the reason is, as follows. Copies of Football News are circulating around Oxford University. Many Dons have been having very late nights trying to puzzle them out. However, some easier puzzles are on the way - mainly for the benefit of these poor undergraduates.

The teams for Saturdays games A and B Vs. Holt are displayed on the notice board.

I have much more to write but that is all for now. See you in number 29.

The eleven question marks represent 11 letters making two words. Letters 2, 4, 6, 9 and 11 are vowels, of which 2 and 4 are the same letter. Letters 1, 9, and 5 and 6 mean a stick 10, 2, 3 and 7 to turn on an axis, 4, 8 and 6 a song. See if you can puzzle that one out.

Editors book of the week. If you want a rattling good book to keep you occupied now that the nights are drawing in here are 2 recommended by me. The Siege of Nanga Parbat, 1856-1953 by Paul Bauer. or Nanga Parbat by Karl Herrligkoffer. This is the epic tale of a famous Himalayan mountain and all the attempts to reach the summit.

A boy was trying for a new office job. "I hope you understand," said the boss, "that we are looking for somebody responsible." "I am very responsible," said the boy. "Why, in my present job, whenever anything goes wrong the boss always says I am responsible."
